- Little and often is usually the best way to memorise vocab. Try using a variety of methods e.g. flashcards, look, cover, write, check, mind maps to see what works best for you
- Practise your speaking questions regularly in a random order. Consider highlighting your main points, recording yourself to self-assess and reducing flash cards over time to improve spontaneity
- Engage with practice materials for reading and listening, such as exam style tasks on kerboodle or past papers
- Engage in independent revision guides for the film and novel that you have studied as well as independent grammar exercise books.
- Practise grammatical accuracy regularly using websites such as 'www.languagesonline.org.uk' and others on your list
- For exposure to native language, visit news sites to read articles and listen to videos. You can also watch television or listen to the radio in the target language

Study supports: available on request with your class teacher

Independent study: carry out independent tasks at home such as reading articles to improve your knowledge of the topics and vocab; watch videos that will help your listening skills

Parental support: testing on vocab and phrases from the vocabulary list or testing speaking questions in a random order
